The Topic: Display Engineering and System Integration

Display Engineering In engineering, system integration commonly means the bringing together of the component subsystems into one system and ensuring that the subsystems function together as one system.

According to leading analyst companies Europe's display market focuses on system integration. But display engineering is more than just putting together constructional elements and devices – it adds value to design and functionalities and capabilities that are possible because of the interactions between subsystems.

System Integration In today's connected world, the role of system integration engineering is becoming increasingly important: more and more systems are designed to connect, both within the system under construction and to systems that are already applied.

Display technologies already affect our daily life which is hardly imaginable without the advantages of them - when it comes to information systems, operating control panels, using communication and consumer products or driving from one point to another.

The meeting At the 34th DFF Working Group Meeting we're going to look at various aspects of display engineering and system integration for outdoor – in home – in car

applications with special attention of e.g. integrating embedded operating systems, interfaces, connectors or such components as touch control or GPS modules.

The agenda will be distributed some weeks before the meeting.

Registration

Please register by fax (see last page) or e-mail by June 11, 2010 to:

Ms Sabine Egerer

Fax.: ++49 (0)69 / 66 03-25 92

email: sabine.egerer@vdma.org

For our guests and lecturers

Please email your presentation as PDF- or PowerPoint-File to Christoph Hardy (dff@vdma.org) by June 11. Note that attachments >5MB may suffer from transmitting problems, so please send a control mail without any attachment, simultaneously.

A PC (running PowerPoint 2003) and a projector will be available during the meeting.

Your presentation will be published in the annex of the minutes.

All new members and guests are invited to briefly introduce their companies.

We also want to encourage our long-time members to give a short update on their current activities in the materials sector. If you are interested to do so, please send a short note to Christoph Hardy (dff@vdma.org).

A PowerPoint presentation template will be sent to you prior to the meeting. Please use this file for your company presentation. In order to not completely get beyond schedule, we have to restrict the short presentations to three slides.
